Nestled in the quaint village of Samode, the 16th-century Samode Palace lies 45 kms. from Jaipur. An enchanting drive into the fortified Palace unveils a stunning sandstone structure set against the Aravalis beyond.

Known to be one of the finest masterpieces of Indo-Sarcenic architecture, the Palace boasts a labyrinth of Mughal arched doorways, colourful, handpainted murals, an alluring Sheesh Mahal, boungevilla-fringed courtyards and more. Laced with carved pillars, hidden alcoves and beautiful terraces, Samode Palace has been globally etched as the epitome of Rajasthani royalty and hospitality.

A photograph of a courtyard at Samode Palace. The courtyard is paved with stone tiles and features two round tables with white tablecloths and yellow runners. Each table is surrounded by green metal chairs with intricate designs. A large, dark blue lamp post stands in the center. A large tree with pink and white flowers hangs over the courtyard. The background shows the ornate, yellow walls of the palace with arches and a wooden horse sculpture on a pedestal.
